Secretary of State Hillary Clinton today announced eight new international climate action initiatives and seven new domestic climate change initiatives, according to a statement from her office. Clinton joined with leaders from seven countries - Albania, Germany, India, Korea, Peru, the Philippines and South Africa - to announce the partnerships at a COP15 event at the United Nations in Copenhagen. "To reach the goal of stabilizing the climate at levels that will prevent the most extreme impacts of climate change, countries and citizens must act now on a global scale," she said. "A global partnership must develop, and each country must take its own responsibilities seriously. In addition to the climate partnership, Clinton announced:
