A new calcium carbonate antacid, calcium carbonate V (CC-V), has been compared with the calcium carbonate USP (CC-USP) for effects on intestinal function in the rat. Prolonged administration of CC-V at intakes of 10 or 20 g/kg b.wt. daily did not result in any gross or histological intestinal lesions although there was a transient increase in tissue potassium content at the higher dose. CC-V was found to be as effective as the reference acid 09e8f5149f
