My first real game was a text adventure called "The Ape Beneath". It's fun. You can play it here, or here. There are lots of Ape images floating around on the web, including Apes coloring pages. I'm a big fan of the original TC series and the TI series. The Toy Box series and the Polly Pocket series are all really cool. I just wish I'd known about the GirlVille series before it was all over the place. From around the age of 8 to 14 I was obsessed with Treasure Planet and associated videos. I could sit and play that game for hours. I like the look of Kiki and Bo but I really like the original TI series too. It is great to see TakaraTomy bringing back some of the classic series now that they can get permission to make them. I saw a very early version of a really fun idea for a game in Gaiden Gaiden and I wish it was still a thing. That would've been a really cool word puzzle game. I've played a lot of Pokemon Yellow and was very sad when they cancelled the whole series. It's really cool to see the old Pokemon being brought back again. It'd be really cool if someone could get the rights to make a version of Pokemon Black Black 2 for the Zeebo handheld too. One of the things I most like about zeebo is that it is so under-appreciated, it's also what has made me put up about it so much. Yes, I remember fondly playing that game on the Nintendo DS The 2 GB+ mobile internet was very popular because it was free, it made a lot of people happy. But it was almost never used at home, people would just connect to go play from the Busou Kaihatsu website. The Gotta Dance game was very popular in North America, it was the first really successful mobile game there. Gotta Dance is a game about breaking your fingers if you don't dance. Each song has a "Check For Fever" point that you get as you dance. The song ends if you get that fever or lose all your points. The "Check For Fever" was usually a musical and dance element to the song so it was also a fun way of enjoying music. The "Check For Fever" was not necessarily a requirement for the song, so it was a good way of testing your own dancing skills for songs you liked
