Download ePubTools Categories Weather Posted on: February 28, 2019 What To Do During St. Patrick's Day Weekend Posted on: February 27, 2019 St. Patrick's Day weekend has arrived! Everyone knows that the month of March is the most exciting month in the calendar, but anyone who is looking for something more exciting than waking up and watching spring weather comes first may be interested in a festival or event that draws together a few thousand people in a city. Here are some things that you can do to experience the best of St. Patrick's Day weekend: St. Patrick's Day Parade The parade is one of the best things about St. Patrick's Day weekend in St. Louis. In many cases, the Saint Patrick's Day parade in St. Louis is the biggest parade in the United States, with two separate parades held in different parts of town. The first parade is the St. Patrick's Day Parade, which travels from Grand Center to North Grand Boulevard and starts at noon. The parade includes Irish dancing, bagpipe bands, costume competitions and a processional. The second parade is the Saint Patrick's Day Parade, which travels from downtown to Olive Boulevard and Vine Street and starts at noon. The parade includes a stage with live music and Celtic art. You can also find a smaller parade in Forest Park in North St. Louis, which is also a fun place to take a tour of. Saint Patrick's Day Beer Conducted by the St. Patrick's Day Foundation, this is the number one Irish beer festival in the U.S. The event takes place in South Grand Avenue, and it includes a ton of great things such as Irish dancing, bagpipers and Irish stand-up comedians. Live music will be played on an outdoor stage throughout the festival. St. Patrick'

My goal is to get bash to do a newline after the first part of the two lines has been diff'd. E.g. if I had a file text a b c and was running diff -q in bash, it would output this (with my desired newline in the output): a b c From what I've read, I should be able to have bash run a command such as sed -e "1s/^[[:space:]]*/&\ /" /tmp/text which would output: a b c

That Usher Show That Usher Show is the fourth album by singer Usher and was released on November 12, 2002. It is his first album with a major label, reaching #4 on the Billboard 200 albums chart. The album is noticeably different from his previous efforts in that it was entirely produced by Usher and has more of a rap and hip hop sound, with strong features from R. Kelly and labelmate Lil' Jon. There are no ballads whatsoever (the only ballad is the Stevie Wonder tribute "Reach Out, I'll Be There"). The album went gold twice, in 2003 and 2005, and sold over 1.2 million copies worldwide. It was not initially released on CD in the United States due to the rise of CD sales over vinyl records, but was eventually released in CD format. There was a combined CD and DVD release. In the United Kingdom a DVD version with bonus tracks was released in November 2006. Background In February 2002, Usher performed live in the UK for the show Top of the Pops 2 where he finished the performance singing "I Was Missing You".

The single was successful in the UK and was certified gold in April 2002, and following the success of his live performance, he also recorded a video for the song. The album was delayed as it initially started to be distributed through Columbia Records. After a dispute with Columbia, Usher set out to relaunch the label. However the title was changed from Usher's Revenge to That Usher Show to differentiate it from the Columbia release of his 2003 album, Here I Am. The album was eventually released through Usher's own Young Chris Entertainment label. Singles The lead single, "OMG", was released on September 25, 2002. The song was a modest success, peaking at number 40 on the Hot 100 and number 32 in the UK. The music video was directed by Kevin Towle. Usher released the second single, "Did It Again", on February 25, 2003. The music video features clips from The Usher and "OMG" video, as well as scenes of Us
