I know that you can set the current location with this method: UIApplication.sharedApplication().setLocationServicesEnabled(true) How do I then change the text of a UITextField that is placed in the notification bar based on the location? A: To solve this, I implemented the following delegates: delegate func isLocationAvailable() -> Bool; delegate func isLocationAvailable(completion: @escaping (_ isAvailable: Bool) -> Void); and I handled the location change using this: (void)application:(UIApplication *)application didChangeAuthorizationStatus:(NSNumber *)status { if ([status boolValue]) { NSLog(@"Location Services Enabled");

In 1931, they became the owners of the small and unknown farmhouse. There were eight children. Later, Hitler's second wife, the divorcee Sophie, lived in the house. Hitler's memoirs say that he always dreamed of returning to the old farmhouse. But in the years after the war, he could not. He himself turned the farmhouse into a building site and started to work on a new house. In 1929, the new house was almost finished. But it was the Wochenschau (daily newsreel) with a film about the ruins of the old school, which made Hitler realize that he must return to the old farmhouse. It became more and more important to him. When Hitler moved into the new house, he reverted to the rooms of the old farmhouse. He put the trunks and boxes of the old life there and decided to live
