I must have been crazy. I couldn't be sure if I killed the man or if he killed me." The author had witnessed a domestic violence incident at a bar. The man had beat the author's boyfriend severely. As the author loaded a pistol and shot the man in self-defense, the man killed her. This is how Allen writes about what he did and the outcome. Upon David's return from the US, David discovered that the search of records revealed a family story that could not be true: My great great great grandfather, Samuel Sahlins, died on his farm on the shore of the Catskill Mountains in 1852. He did NOT arrive in America until 1854. The first Samuel Sahlins who arrived in America in 1854 was my grandfather, Levi Sahlins, who died in 1917. Sahlins Bay is a rich description of the lifestyle of 19th century Jewish immigrants and is written by a descendant of Levi Sahlins, David S. Sahlins. In the research project, the author Samuel Sahlins would have been subject to a
