Although individuals have often trained in different parts of the world, the SSIB is the only organization that brings together such a diverse group of individuals who also work in the same field. SSIB provides a forum for communication, collaboration, and the exchange of new ideas as well as a training ground for PhD students. The SSIB 2016 meeting will be held in Kota Kinabalu (Malaysia) from March 3-6, 2016. The theme of this meeting is 'Stress responses in food choice'. In addition to presentations at the meeting, there will also be symposia and poster sessions. The meeting will be preceded by a new program of pre-meeting workshops, pre-meeting mini-courses, and a mini-symposium, including a poster session. This will provide a formal start to the program, allowing researchers who have not yet begun their summer fieldwork, or are unable to travel in the short term, to have an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the topics and participants before attending the meeting.Effect of glycine and uridine on rapid-onset antidepressant-like activity in the rat forced swim test. To investigate the antidepressant activity of glycine and uridine. The behavioural pharmacological effects of both compounds were assayed using the forced swim test (FST). Glycine and uridine were injected into the intraperitoneal or intravenous route. The central activity of glycine was tested at 100mg/kg. Test compounds were administered 60min after FST. The dose-effect curves were characterized by the LD(50)
