The blast comes about five days after a series of suicide bombings rocked Baghdad and Samarra, the capital. Attackers have targeted civilian shopping centers in well-to-do neighborhoods. "This is a horrific attack on innocent Iraqis. These acts of terrorism cannot be tolerated. The people of Iraq have bravely withstood the relentless violence of terrorists over the past year, but now they deserve a better life. "The United States continues to lead a global coalition to seek justice and peace. We have stood with Iraq against terrorists and have implemented a new strategic partnership with Iraq. "Through the strategic alliance we have agreed to deepen our cooperation in every security area from counterterrorism to border security, law enforcement and counternarcotics." The effort is seen as a significant improvement on the breakdown of the U.S. relationship with Iraq since last May when U.S. forces pulled out under pressure from a rising insurgency. An estimated 4,000 U.S. soldiers are in Iraq, working with Iraqi forces and helping with security. A U.S. military spokesman said no U.S. military casualties had been reported. The U.S. military said Iraqi forces backed by U.S. air and artillery strikes had captured a small town near Tikrit after government forces had lost control of it to an al-Qaida-inspired insurgent group. Efforts to isolate extremists from Sunni Arab towns in which they have operated with impunity for years now rely largely on U.S. air support and the presence of the 3,000-strong U.S. mission in Baghdad. U.S. forces help train the Iraqi army. The latest terror strike came five days after a series of suicide bombings rocked Baghdad and Samarra, the capital. Attackers have targeted civilian shopping centers in well-to-do neighborhoods. More than 20 people were killed and over 100 wounded. Samarra, Iraq's second-largest city. is about 250 km (160 miles) north of Baghdad. The blast comes about five days after a series of suicide bombings rocked Baghdad and Samarra, the capital.
