However, even if you are not a programmer, you can still build custom ribbons in Access. In this article, we will look at a tool called Access Designer. The Access Designer is a tool that will help you create custom ribbons. The Access Designer is a tool that will allow you to create custom ribbons. The Access Designer is available for Microsoft Office Access 2007 and Access 2010. I use Access 2010 which is why I have not mentioned it in the title of the article. The Access Designer can create new forms, queries, or reports. Why create a custom ribbon? If you are creating a corporate application where the application is ready and your boss wants to see your skill set, then a standard ribbon is fine. However, if you are creating a program for your own use, then it's best to have a standard ribbon designed for you. There's no point in paying money to have someone else design something for you that you can make yourself. In either case, an online tool like this is a good way to quickly see how far you can customise the standard ribbon. The following features are included: Customizable Quick: You create the 'edit' / 'view' / 'save' controls using the 'drop down arrow' on the 'ribbon area' Flexible Add as many controls as you like Control sizes as you like Control functionality as you like Add controls wherever you like Ribbon Creator provides the following advantages in creating a ribbon: Customizable Quick Flexible Extensible Efficient It comes bundled with a database You can host it on your own webserver Using your own database ensures that the customizations are automatically saved.
