I'm working on a SQL query to update values in a database column, according to some column names. I'm pulling in data via a stored procedure. My trouble is I need the column name to be dynamic, and I am unable to figure out how to accomplish that. This is the query I'm working with at the moment: select update_timestamps from table_name I need to have the database perform an update on all of the fields if certain criteria are met. A: The only valid way to dynamically create SQL is to parse the query string/tokenized text and build the necessary SQL dynamically. This is a common technique for building dynamic SQL.
